

HAUTE LIVING

Haute 100 The most influential people in the world's most entertaining city

Haute

100

The most influential people in the world's most entertaining city

JENNIFER ANISTON

Category Entertainers
Industry Film

What Makes Her Haute

Six years after Friends' series finale, Jennifer Aniston is still one of the hottest and hautest actors in Hollywood, earning $27 million last year, according to Forbes. In 2005, Aniston became the first-ever GQ Woman of the Year. She has appeared on People's annual list of "The Most Beautiful" every year since 1995.

DAN BANE

Category Thinkers
Industry Supermarkets
Company Trader Joe's

What Makes Him Haute

He is the chairman and CEO of Trader Joe's, the alternative grocery store that despite its low-price mentality, managed to earn about $8 billion in sales last year. Bane started with the company in 1998 as the president of Trader Joe's West and was promoted to CEO in 2001. He made the very smart decision to bring in Charles Shaw wine to the supermarket, which Trader Joe's sells more than 13 million cases of each year.

MICHAEL & LAURA BEAUDRY

Category Power Couples

Industries Jewelry

Company Michael Beaudry Jewelry

What Makes Them Haute

Mention the name Beaudry to any jewelry expert and the reaction will always be one of awe and praise. What started off as the design of a single diamond ring has flourished into the Michael Beaudry jewelry empire. Laura recently debuted her own jewelry collection, which features the same elegance and intricacy as her husband's.

M. Keck oversees the $1.3 billion non-profit W.M. Keck Foundation, which focuses on science and engineering research, medical research, undergraduate education, and Southern California.

ROBERT DOWNEY, JR

Category Entertainers

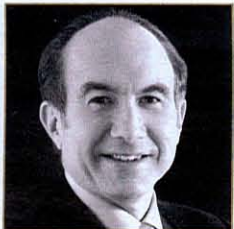

Industry Film

What Makes Him

Haute He's known as Hollywood's comeback kid, stemming from several major career comebacks. In particular, he made a comeback in 2008 with an Oscar-nominated performance in Tropic Thunder and playing Tony Stark in Iron Man, which he reprised in Iron Man 2 earlier this year. He reportedly ranked in around $33 million in 2010 with upcoming flicks like the Sherlock Holmes sequel and Due Date.

PHILIPPE DAUMAN

Category Thinkers

Industry Film

Company Viacom

What Makes Him

Haute Though he's been with the media conglomerate company since 1987, serving as CEO during the past four years has given him the opportunity to call the big shots.

ARI EMANUEL

Category

Entrepreneurs

Industry Talent

Company William Morris Endeavor Entertainment

What Makes Him

Haute As the founder of Endeavor and now co-chief executive of WME, this super agent now represents some of the top names in the entertainment industry and is said to be the agent who Entourage's Ari Gold originates from. Clients of his include Vin Diesel, Reese Witherspoon, Mark Wahlberg, Matt Damon, and Martin Scorsese.

KEVIN FEIGE

Category Thinkers

Industry Film

Company Marvel Studios

What Makes Him

Haute He began working on Marvel movies in 1998 as an associate producer on X-Men. From co-producer to executive producer to president of Marvel Studios, Feige is behind Spider Man 1, 2, 3, Iron Man 1 and 2, and The Incredible Hulk. Marvel movies and licensed properties have generated $7.3 billion at the box office. Up and coming Marvel comic projects include Thor, The First Avenger: Captain America, and The Avengers.

ALAN FUERSTMAN

Category

Entrepreneurs

Industry Hospitality

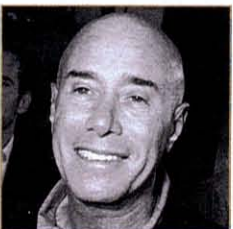

Company Montage Hotels

What Makes Him

Haute He is founder and CEO of Montage Hotels, a budding five-star resort company with landmark locations in Laguna Beach and Beverly Hills. Montage Deer Valley, a luxury ski resort in Utah, is scheduled to open in December 2010. Fuerstman recently won the award for "One to Watch" by Virtuoso's "Best of the Best" Hotel Awards, which honor the world's most prestigious hotel and hospitality professionals.

DAVID GEFFEN

Category

Billionaires

Industry

Entertainment

Company DreamWorks SKG

What Makes Him

Haute Geffen is an American record executive, film producer, theatrical producer, and philanthropist. He first founded Asylum Records in 1970 (Eagles) followed by Geffen Records (Aerosmith, Guns N' Roses). He then moved on to start entertainment boutique DreamWorks with partners Jeffrey Katzenberg and Steven Spielberg, eventually selling it to Viacom for $1.5 billion. His personal $175 million profits are said to have gone to charity.

FRANK GEHRY

Category Originators

Industry Architecture

Company Gehry Partners, LLP

What Makes Him

Haute Gehry is perhaps most famous for his design of the Guggenheim Museum in Bilbao, Spain, but Angelenos know him for the Walt Disney Concert Hall, which opened in 2003 and was quickly recognized as perhaps his greatest work, not only for the originality of its design, but for its functionality. The acoustics of the hall were widely praised, and it became one of the great performance venues in the world. It's a symbol of downtown Los Angeles as a center of culture. In the works is the $3 billion Grand Avenue complex.

ALEC GORES

Category Billionaires

Industry Private Equity

Company Gores Group

What Makes Him

Haute Gores is the founder, chairman, and CEO of

The Gores Group, an extremely lucrative private-based equity firm that specializes in acquiring multi-million dollar businesses. Their most recent acquisition was Alliance Entertainment in early September, which is the largest wholesale distributor of CDs, DVDs, and video games in the U.S.

BETTY GRAHAM

Category

Entrepreneurs

Industry Real Estate

Company Coldwell Banker

What Makes Her

Haute Since 2005, she's been president and COO of the Greater Los Angeles branch of Coldwell Banker Residential